Beecher on Greenbacks.

[From the Boston Journal.] The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher opened the course of lectures and entertainments at the North-Avenue Congregational church, Cambridge, last evening. His subject was "The Reign of the Common People," and the purpose was to show the changes which the general spread of intelligence has that which the greenback represents. Continuing on the same subject he said:

The idea that a government can create money by simply stamping paper or leather is a theory which may live for a day or two or a season, but if there ever was anything that would cure itself, that will. I am not that would cure itself, that will. I am not afraid of its ultimate results. I know that the people say boldly that it is the Government that determines the currency. What is the currency? It is the means by which n man can exchange one thing for another. buy a pound of snuff. I cannot carry around anything so bulky as an ox. I have got to have something by which I can exchange one kind of property for another. What should you select? You don't need to select anything at all; you might as well about which the nations agree, and I don't else. There is one thing upon which they are singularly united, upon which they successive experiences of nations. For more than five thousand years we have the through thousands of years gold and silver have been the same. Gold is gold everywhere. Five dollars of gold is the same everywhere, and the man who has gold in his hand can go anywhere and exchange it for property. Paper is nothing but a representative of gold, used for the sake of convenience, as property is too bulky for exchange. But and silver, and it is just as good as they are Vanderbilt weat down to the bank one day with a piece of paper in his fingers, and he that he would have had to carry nearly five needs revising, then all the objections to tons. But your paper is good for what you exchange it for. If you can exchange it for a bouse or a farm it is good for that. If it cannot be exchanged for property, or for gold or for silver, what is it good for? All gold and silver represent property, all paper represents gold or silver, and it ought to represent them definition in the silver. resent them definitely. If you print a fivedollar bill you must be definite about what it represents-wheat, or cloth, or gold. But if it is merely five dollars, and you offer it to a man and he says he will not pay gold or silver for it, or you offer it to the Government and it says it will not pay gold or silver for it, then its face-value goes down. Why cannot the Government make papermoney? Because it can do with a reality what it cannot do with a sham. Government only regulates existing values, and in the case of paper it is proposed not to regulate value but to give it a value. There is value to paper. They can say that paper shall be equivalent to gold and redeemed in it, but no government on earth can say that zero means something.

Repudiates the Greenback Craze. SUGAR RUN, VA., October 16, 1878.

Editor of the Pearisburg Virginian: Dear Sir,-As the National Greenback party formed a club at Wabash, in this county, several days ago, and as I was called to the presidential chair of that organization, I accepted the position, not properly understanding the platform and principles of the party, and at a meeting held on the 8th instant I called on Mr. Ludwig, of Bland county, to give us his views, desiring light and information on the subject. Mr. Ludwig went on to explain the object of this great National party to be to issue greenbacks sufficient to pay off the whole national debt (say two billions of dollars) and force the bondholders to take them for their bonds, which were contracted for gold, and ought to be paid in gold. Squire Cecil, who was present on the occasion, asked him what he would do with the contract. He answered, "We would d-n the contract"; after which I called upon D. R. Cecil to give his views on the subject, which he did, stating that such a proposition would be striking at the very foundation of our liberties, destroying the sacred obligations of contracts, and leave us no protection to our repudiate a contract in a specified bond they would have as good a right to repuas was the Continental and Confederate money. A rather remarkable chapter of domestic history has just come to light in this city.
Years ago John Garrison, then a student, afterwards a minister of the gospel, marstory is telegraphed from Springfield. Ohio: afterwards a minister of the gospel, mar-ried Miss Sallie Christie. Both were memried Miss Sallie Christie. Both were members of Springfield's first families. After DAINTS! PAINTS! He indulged in every iine of foreign poyelty. He travelled everywhere that travel was known. He engaged in almost every possible occupation, and after eight years of wandering returned to his native land and located at Middletown, Ohio, where he soon amassed a considerable competency. A few weeks since he determined to come to this city and inquire after his wife, supposing her either dead or divorced. He found her yet true to him, and the couple were reunited, and are now living happily at Middletown.
